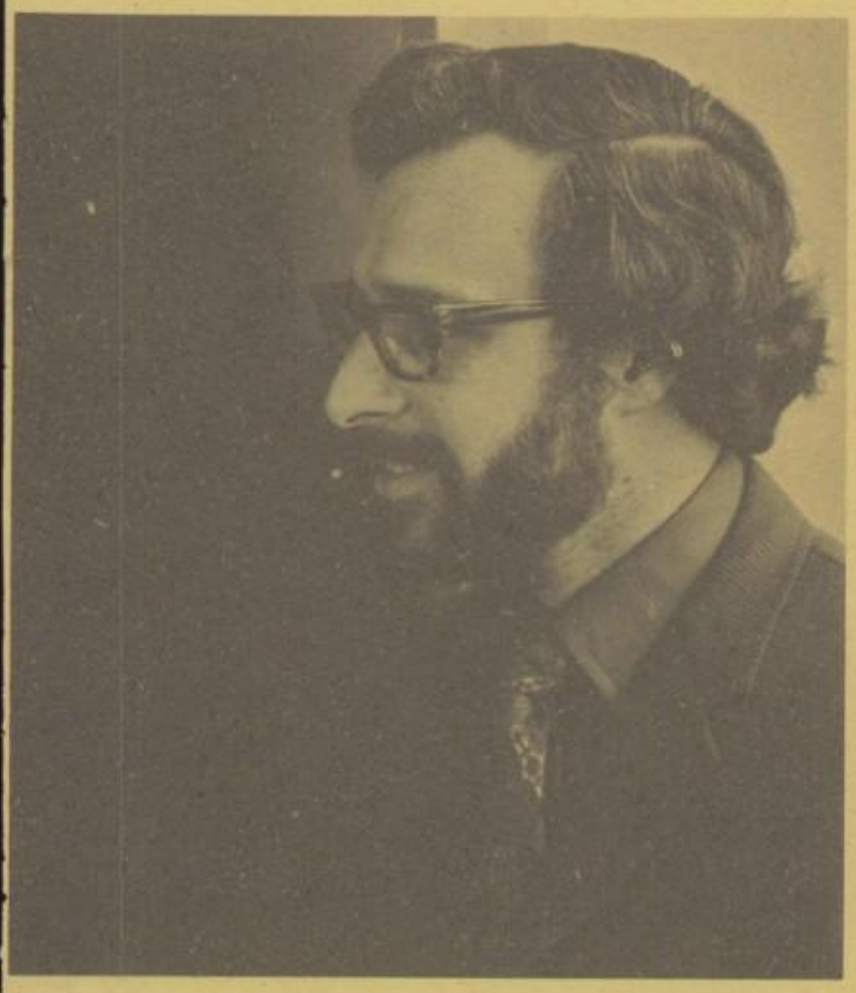
Mr. "D"



In the time that he has served as our class advisor, Mr. Peter DiCostanzo has led us to understand our own worth and human dignity. He has allowed us to be all we could be and aimed us for the moon. Serving us with inspiration and seasoning our activities with his own tinctures and touches, he has shared in our banquet of learning.

The extent of his contributions transcends the practical and rests upon the totality of our experience. His participation in our affairs has ranged from bagging peanuts for the football games to championing class initiatives on the prom and class trips. The weight upon his back depresses his shoulders only to force back his head so that he may see the green light. He has taught responsibility by accepting responsibility.

When walking by the Senior Activities Room you can sometimes sense that blue pall of melancholy which lies over us during times of failure, and you can sometimes hear the joy of success ringing in chortles and laughter. There is a force which raises us from our wistful dreams and tempers our accomplishments with humility. That force is he who leads by example, Mr. DiCostanzo, to whom we dedicate this book.

Together the jetties and waves have the task Of guiding

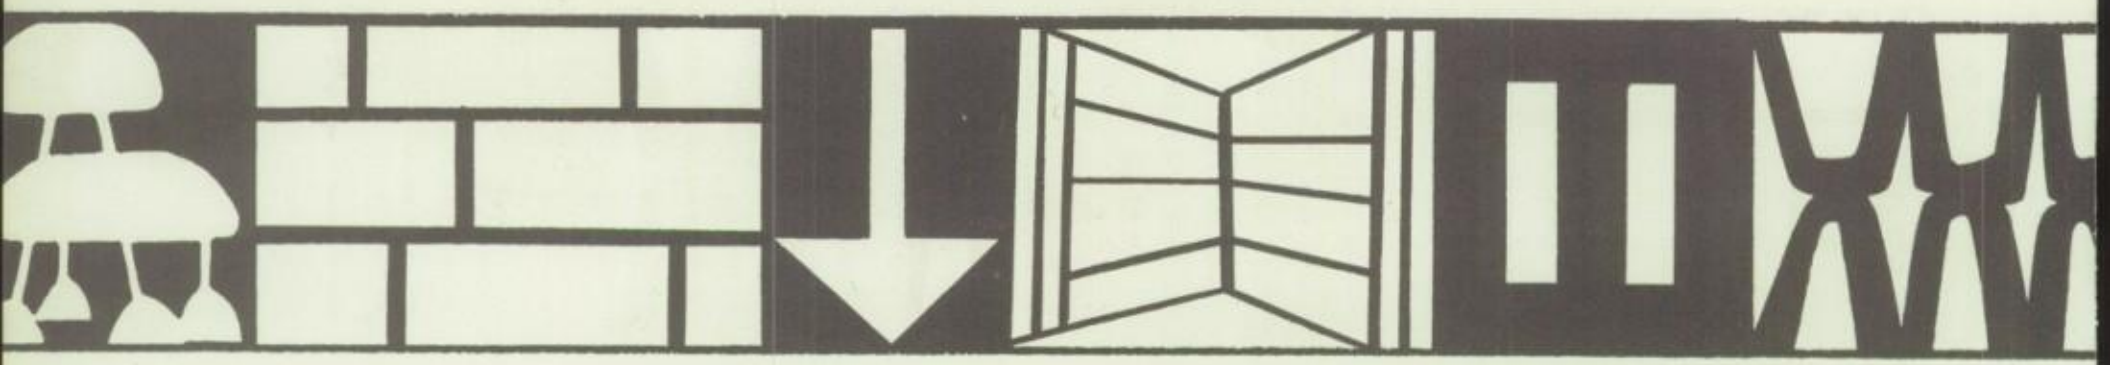
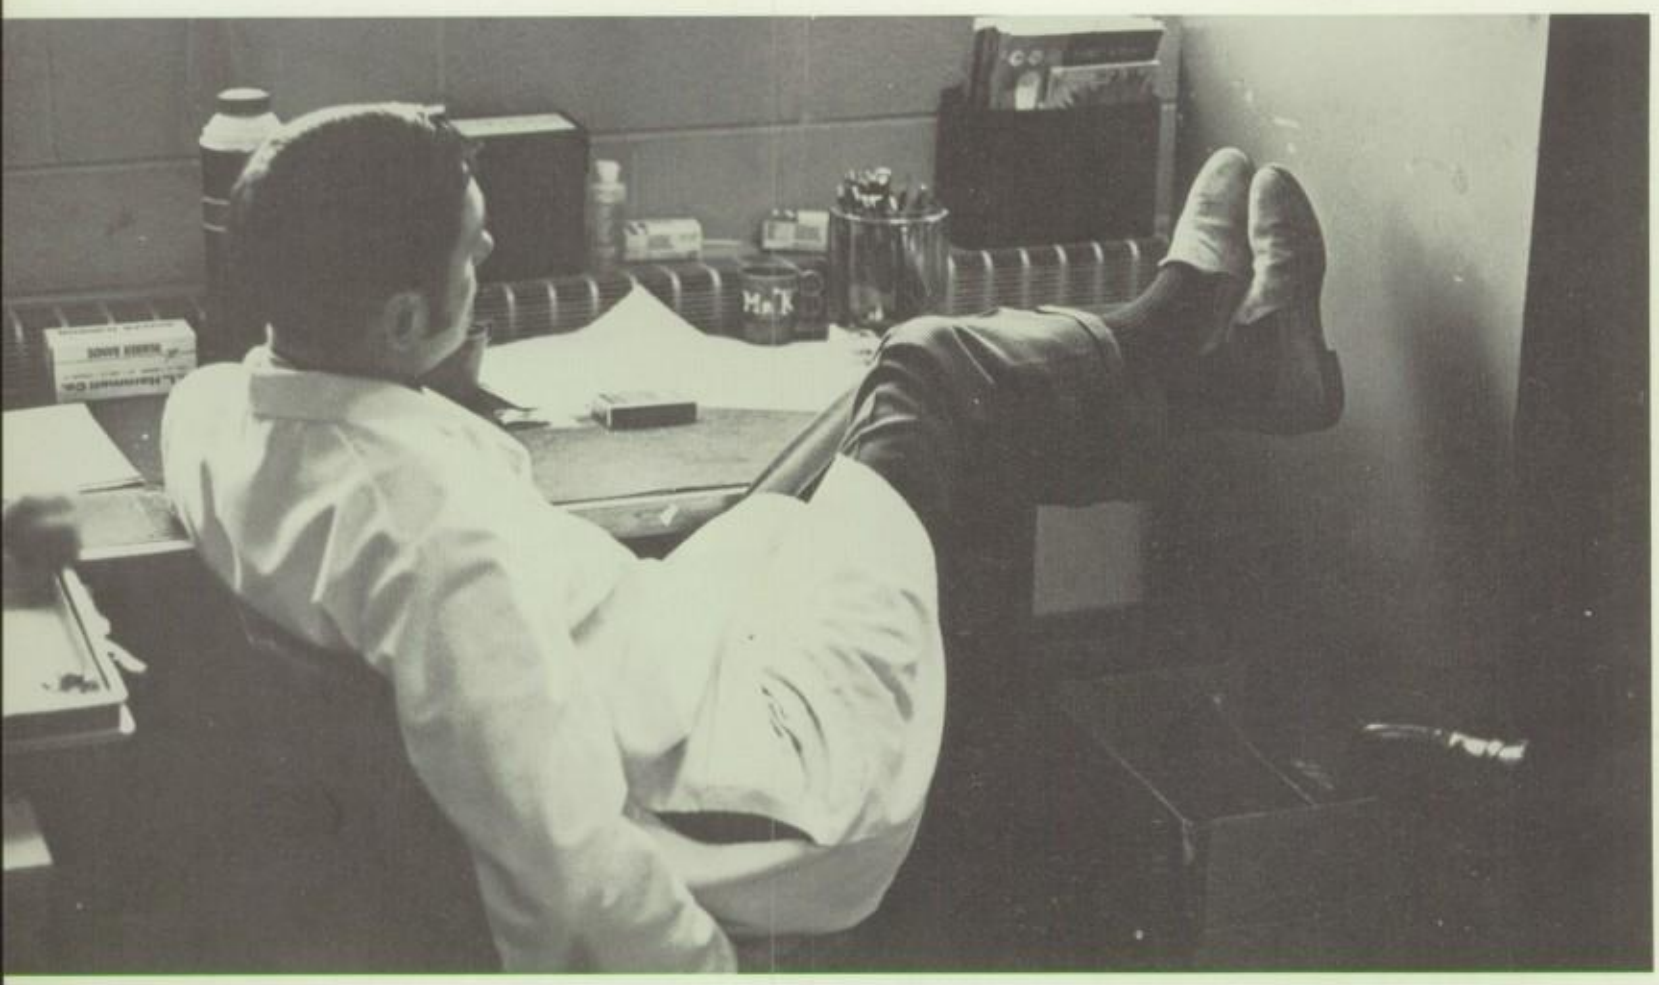
the sea life to shore where they bask.





Late August. The heat beats down upon the framework of the school as a bird flies by and takes the last crumb to his fledglings. Inside, in the freshly painted, untouched cafeteria, the juke box is being loaded with songs of a new year. Lockers are opened and closed in search of something left from the past year, and the windows creak when the janitors let in some clean fresh air. Early September. Noise echoes off the walls of the auditorium as the teachers discuss new problems and draw up new maps to help the newer elements of the building. Classes and room numbers are checked and rechecked on the acres of IBM sheets making certain that all names correspond to their respective numbers. September edges on. First day. Life.

in the town of west september came and the clocks were dusted and rewound and gates were opened as hordes of innocents jammed the halls to meet their leader but alas, the town was without principal leaving his short-lived dynasty in great disarray, he left for belmont but lo and behold from the shadows rose a principal of assistance to steer his ship toward safety for ninety and some days and the people shouted praising the name of ROWAN
and he was named principal of the reins by the holies through winter and father doyle braving the hardships he gathered his mighty steeds riding off into the sunset (his office is open from 8 to 4 on weekdays try him, you'll like him)

Miss Suann Pontius

Mrs. Jill R. Woodcock

Visiting hours are from 7:45 to 2:30 on the second Thursday of every month but you can really go whenever you want. They can change schedules, fill out forms, ask questions, and leap buildings with a single bound. They are your guidance counselors, and that's what they're there for. If you want to drop English for lunch, only they can do it. They arrange conferences with your parents, hoping to iron out all the little things which have been bothering you (and your teachers). They're always trying to help. They can tell you how to register for SAT's (even if you don't want to know), and they can show you a college by pulling out all the catalogs that they have accumulated over the years. But you don't really know where you want to go until you've heard more about it, and read about it, and seen it. Then you write away for an application, and fill it in, making sure that you check the right boxes, only to find out that the school is another "long shot", and you needed a "sure thing." But you've already heard from your first choice and now you know where you want to go, and they helped you, and you shouldn't have worried at all because that's their job, and they've been doing it for years.

Thou art but a seed planted in the garden.
Be thou assured that when thou enter Upon the dwelling where the learned be
That questions be asked of men and roses
And ancient grudges of youthful times.
Methinks the parents are oft to blame
For the problems 'twixt households
And habits of study.
But children naught can remove this strife
Sans qualities of friendship
And merciful trust;
Choosing lead, gold, or silver
To win thee a wife;
For if we borrow do we not return?

Thou art rooted in the garden.
Pray heaven that March come Less needless misfortunes.
Still question of men
And their actions on others.
Alone they do plot until time does not seem
To control what their offices
Lend to their cause.
A blade and a body connect
And the fall.

Thou art but a stem in the garden.
Yet question this time
Of a man and his self
And a friend, or devil?
An accursed double knave.
'Twas a network of jealousy
Trapping them all
And a Moor—far too proud
For his "honest" good friend—
Full of blood . . . monstrous birth.
Where lies and deceit
Do encompass the globe
—Identity nonetheless burdens the load.

Thou art but a bud.
No love is quite dear
As a mother's true love
Who accused of incest does lie in her bed
Till a man or a son
Comes to speak of a fear
For self or his lady, not his natural love.
But be brief.
Thee were better have need
Of some right conversation;
Lest prithee no more
It is time to move on . . .
Thou art blossoming in the garden of time.

Take 1 part Neanderthal. Mix well with early Asian Tribes, and season with tests, quizzes, and Terms to Understand. Let stand, then add 2 cups of the Contemporary World. As mixture may tend to evaporate, immediately beat in a tsp. of critical thinking, 1¼ cups annotated bibliography, 3 cups of concepts, and a pinch of finely chopped intellectual honesty. Stir creatively. Pour into a pan lined with communism, and constitutional fallacies. Spread evenly with knife, for mixture may tend to bubble over. Bake in high pressure atmosphere till done.

Mathematics

It equals exponents, vectors, logarithms, functions, complex numbers, and derivatives. It signifies homework, and "bombing a test." It represents a musty book, a pencil, and time.

It exists as a second derivative changing sign. Knowing a sinusoid's amplitude, phase shift and period. Or calculating how long it would take 3 men to do a job done by 8 men in 3 hours.

It occurs with silence, worry, laughter, boredom, and "moving right along." It defies all logic, but it belongs to us.

Purpose: To determine the true origins of life with certain given materials.

Materials: 10 dissectable objects, 9 fumes of formaldehyde, 8 ethered fruit flies, 7 clustered atoms, 6 chains of carbon, 5 reproduction cells, 4 hatching chicks, 3 dead rats, 2-headed planaria, and a Partridge in a Pear Tree.

Procedure: Observe and record all changes, six periods per week, for a term of 180 days. Place all findings on data chart.

Data: Refer to data chart.

Conclusion: By observing the aforementioned materials, it was determined that the data was correct in spite of a few misplaced dissected objects. Also, it was noted that the human sweat, rags, and wheat did not spontaneously generate to replace the three dead rats. Finally, that life as a chemical function is really the most complex of all ideas.

Assuming that the y-intercept is—273, I'm sure that you can determine the mole ratio between hydrogen tetrafluoride and water. If you can't figure out the problem just try another method—either water displacement, crystallization, or Boyle's Law. Once you have found your slope you can easily extrapolate the line off your graph but you must remember to balance the equation first because you will find it incorrect and imprecise, not inaccurate, if you don't. After interpollating your findings let me check them with the standard to determine your deviation. The test is on Thursday and it will cover chapters 1-5, omitting section 4b in Part II. Certainly you should have no difficulty if . . . After school help will be in E-24.

In first year language I wondered a lot. About verbs and nouns and I and you and whether or not all languages were unstructured like Latin, and I wondered if I would make it . . . through columns and pages and books of vocabulary and grammar and tenses. I learned that the alphabet was not pronounced as it was in English so I ran home and talked to my mirror, shaping, and forming, and saying while laughing, but I always forgot. I even memorized and translated and listened, then read and spoke and wrote, until one day, four years later, I realized something . . . that it was possible to think in another language . . . that maybe I had learned something . . . that it was all worth it. All the days I spent in language lab keeping my teacher in sight so I knew when she would tune in on me, and watching the arrow jerk with the sound of my voice were actually learning experiences. But at least I was finished with looking up words in the wrong side of the two-language dictionary so I tossed it in the trash and went to Europe.

We are concerned with technique and atmosphere. A classroom must make you feel like a sculptor, or a printer, or a seamstress. If you walk into A-11 you'll see a rusty old radio, batteries included, potted plants in hanging planters, potted plants in hand-thrown pots, and more potted plants. You'll hear the clacking of a melted-bottle mobile when the wind blows, and you'll feel terra cotta, or just plain clay . . . to pinch, coil, stab, or throw however you like. You'll find true satisfaction in the beauty of your art.
If you wander down to A-1 you'll see pins and needles and patterns darting all over, and possibly even learn which way the nap really goes. And it all works out in the end because you've made something, something you can use and keep with you.

Physical Education

The freshmen have to make sure their gym suits are cleaned and pressed every week. They learn about being a "floater" and almost always end up on the 600 yard track. The Seniors walk around in their 7th grade gym suits and black opaque stockings that they hope the teacher won't notice. Main goal: Have your trick knee go out at approximately the same time as the apparatus unit starts. Remember when Rebecca Schwartz flew over the vaulting horse and landed on one arm? The gym teachers probably remember. They remember everyone. After four years of having the same girls, they really get to know you, and you know them, and at the end you feel a little sad when you finally hang your worn-out gym suit from the rafters in the locker room, and leave.

But you still have those wonderful memories of health class where you learned how to breathe life into a plastic doll who went by the name of "Recessie-Annie," and of the day you thought you had only one month to live because you were certain you had contracted Parkinson's disease. But you managed to make it through co-ed Drivers Ed and survive the Smitty System and the ever-so-popular Signal 30.

We didn't think we would make it. Didn't it seem like we played basketball in F-wing parking lot almost every day of the year? While you were taking a math test, we were out there dribbling, and passing, and palming. But all you noticed was how funny we really were . . . in our gym shorts, dribbling practically across Chapel Avenue to sink a basket . . . maybe by next year they'll make gym co-ed, too. I can't wait. I can.

If you have ever stood in the middle of a riser with about fifty other people in very hot choir gowns you must have realized that the man standing in front of you with his back to the audience is sweating more than you because he's counting on you to sing an intricate, syncopated rhythm in the next song.

If you have ever sat in the middle of a multitude of playing instruments knowing that you're on the last page before the applause you must have noticed that the man in front of you with the baton in his hand is sweating more than you. But at the end he winks and smiles and that applause sounds even better.

While working in the library the other day, Webster's 8th Edition suddenly plunged from the neatly arranged shelf, landing with a thud on my foot. As I winced with pain, I could hear a stern shh . . . h from the librarian across the room. I headed for the nurse's office only to be stopped by Sarge who demanded a pass. All that I could offer was half of a yellow library reference pass, but when he saw my foot, he personally escorted me down the hall. While sitting with a carefully wrapped ice pack on my foot I made up for lost time and completed my research paper (with the help of a sympathetic nurse). Then I painfully made my way to my next class to hand in the paper only to find a substitute in front of the room.

Maintenance

Even when you're hungry it's sometimes an effort to get yourself up to buy lunch. You wish, maybe, that someone would serve you, but the closest you'll come to that is a nice man with a huge, gray trashcan rolling up and down the aisles of munching mouths, peddling for trash. Decisions, decisions. You really never have to move if you have an a la carte lunch, but it's the hot lunch that is a bother—return the plates and silverware and leftover dessert—making sure that you toss each implement in its respective place. And, whether you believe it or not, that nice, smiling man on the other side of the counter will have everything ready and waiting for you tomorrow when you come back . . . (but it's Thanksgiving so there are no decisions to be made.)

At first the idea of a whole new schedule and way of life seems so faraway and unreal, but before there is enough time even to consider the change, it has already happened. Entering an unknown structure and filling it with life, with emotion . . . filling it full. There is an emptiness inside each individual too, which must and can be filled by doing and being a part . . . A part that thrives on involvement and concern for others, because that picture in every wallet is the shell of a human and it is up to each individual to search for all that fills the shell. Searching. Direction. Need. Underclassmen.

In the beginning there were multitudes of small people roaming the school and they were without direction. But out of the darkness spoke the Administration and sendeth a bewhiskered advisor to these people called freshmen. Soon an event was arranged and out of the multitudes arose the chosen leaders.

And it came to pass that this small group called the cabinet gained the faith of the people. When the Administration prophesied a homecoming game, freshmen came to the garage of Berkowitz in great numbers. They inscribed in great letters on a float: "75 has the prescription for success."Spirit did not wane after the homecoming, and freshmen sought to join such activities as the Loyal Assembly or the Pretzel Committee. And every Monday and Wednesday afternoon the cafeteria ranneth over with students eating freshmen pretzels. This proved to be a profitable method of making money for future use. The freshmen did not despair in this temporary task, for they knew that some day the class of '75 would inherit the school.

The era of sweet sixteens is almost over and numbers are more serious to juniors. There never seems to be enough time to read about the ideas of Mr. Jefferson and Holden C., or to draw conic sections and graph mole ratios. There's never enough time to think for yourself.

Precious Saturday morning sleep is lost to the College Entrance Examination Board—Code 311377. PSAT combined with NMSQT for convenience? Then that Saturday comes when test centers, nationwide, synchronize, and exactly at 8 A.M. thousands of college bound youths see how verbal and mathematical they can be—200 points for a name. Shoot for 800. Sure.

Remember to check the Bulletin of Information, for all numbers must correspond or the scores will not be transferred. Please do not write a letter. Enclose $2.00 and mail to CEEB, Box 592, Princeton. No college, and no job without a social security number . . . 161-99-2345.

The Class of '73 lives in an enchanted land where all of the subjects are gifted with magical enthusiasm and spirit. Inhabitants include an enterprising advisor, lusty fair young maidens, a great big papier maché vulture, and lots and lots of loyal juniors.

They built a giant sneaker stomping an Indian, but one day Mother Nature rained upon their float and transformed it into a muddle of soggy white napkins. The juniors used their magic in combination with tears, toil, and loss of sleep, never losing their characteristic high morale, to produce a first-prize winning float. Ambitious and impetuous, the Class of '73 is eager for competition. After years of trying to out-do '72, the juniors consented to join forces in giving a "rip'n 'snortin' " square dance. The Class of '73 maintains a firm belief in its greatness . . . a class rich with magical energy, devotion, and enthusiasm.

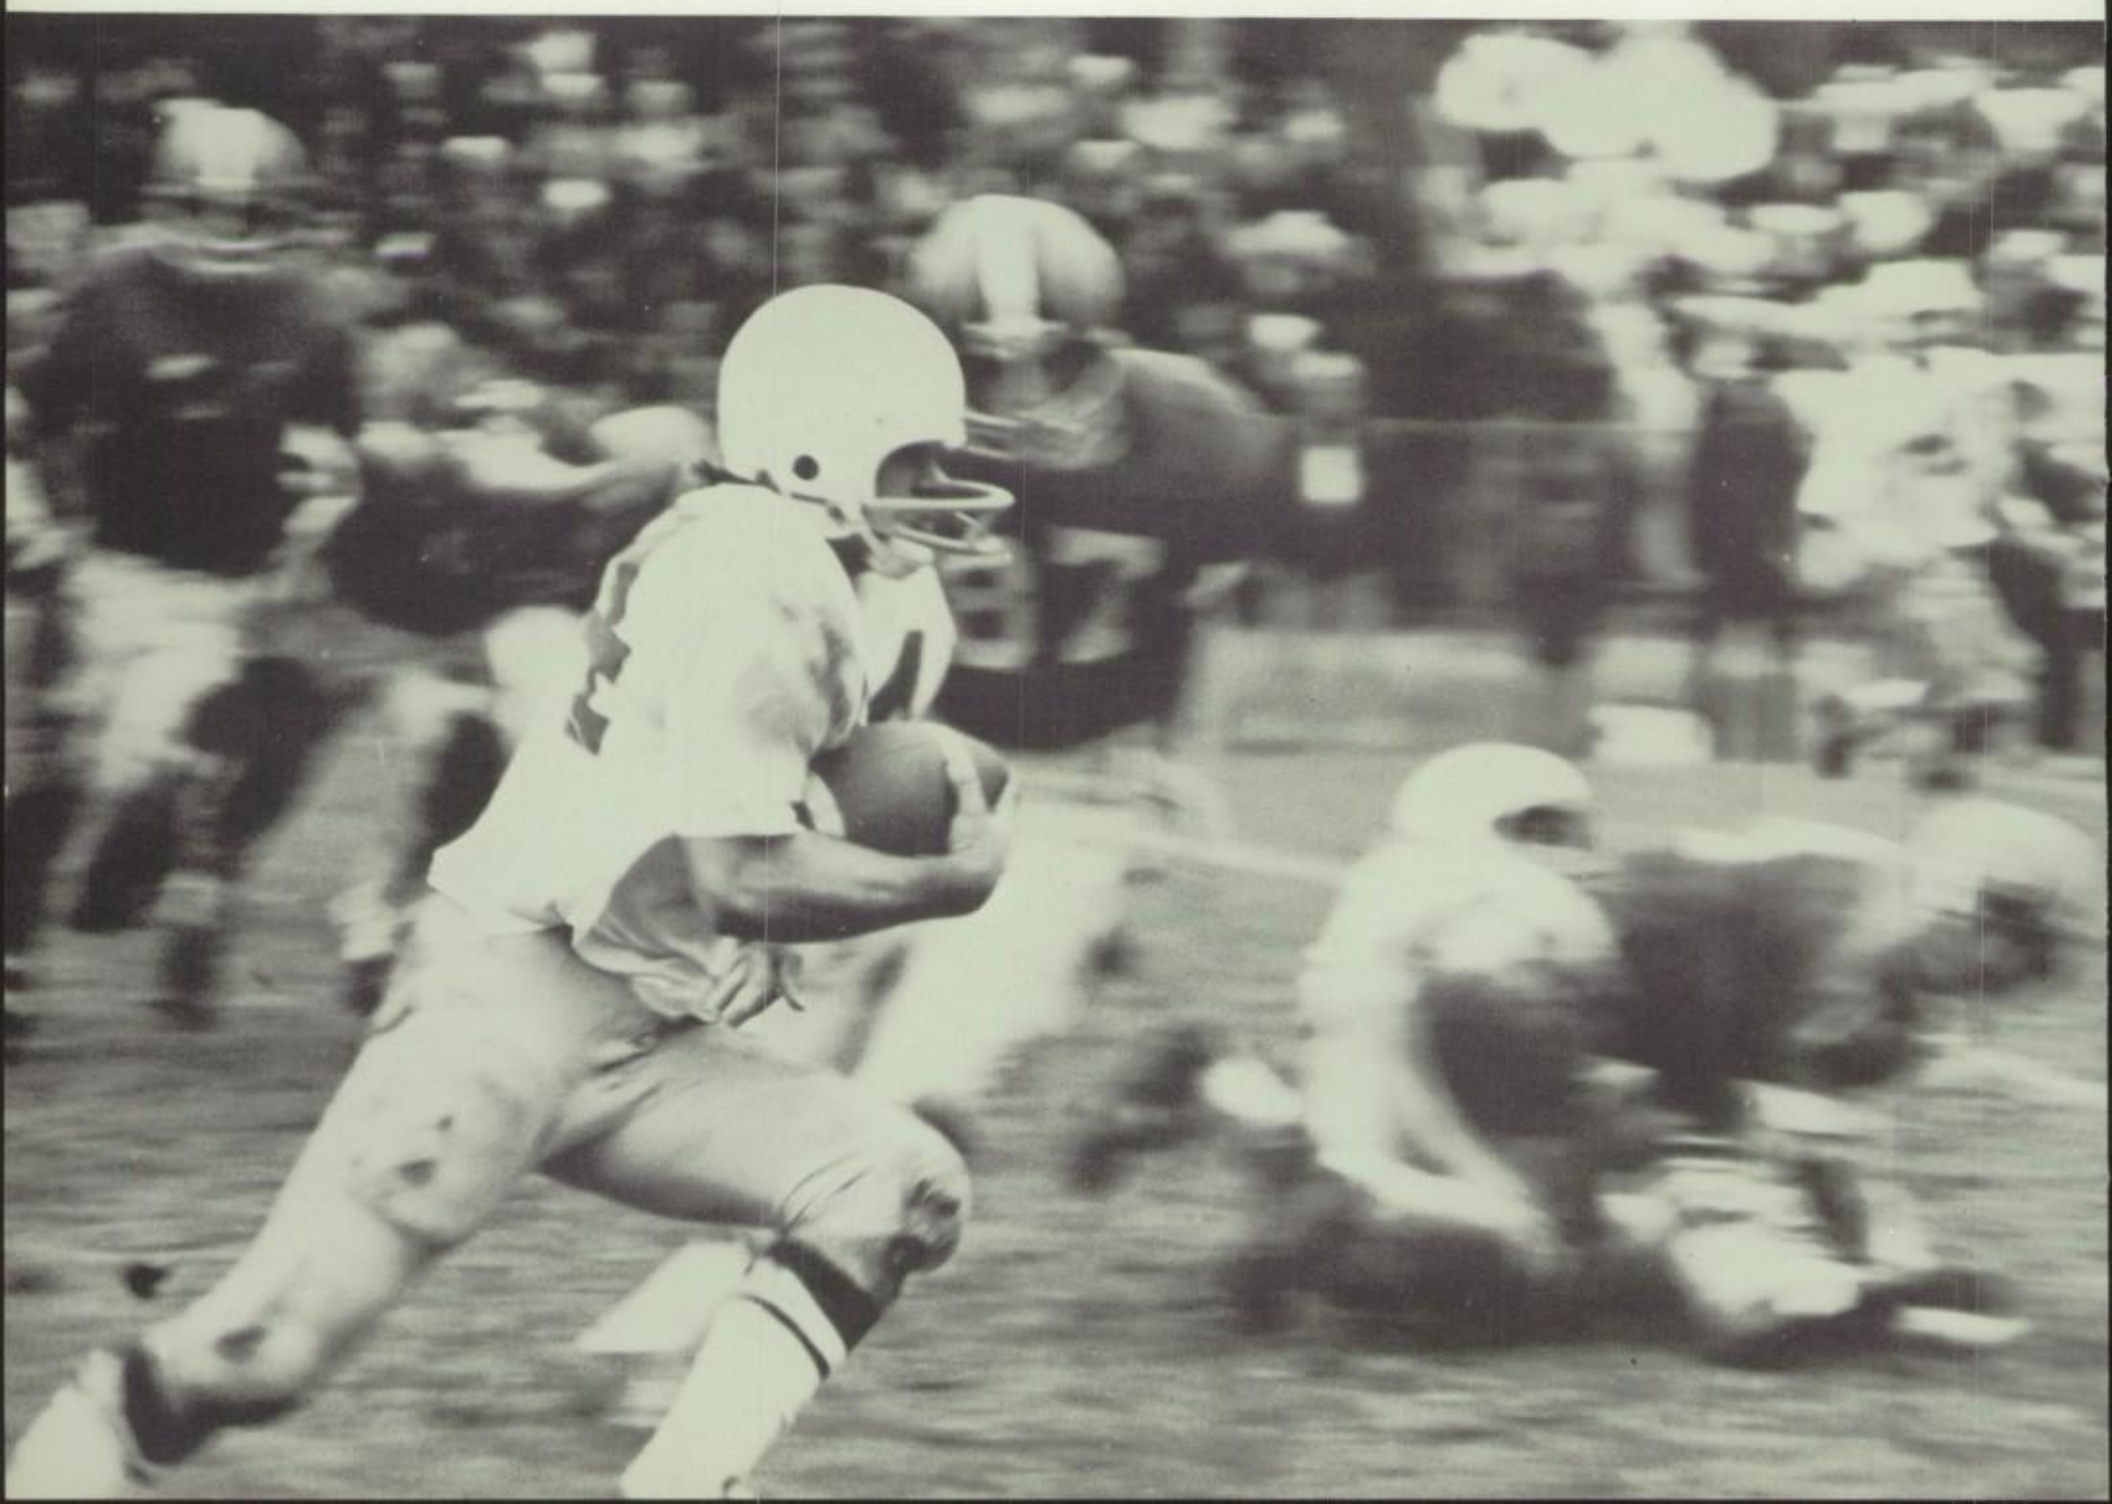
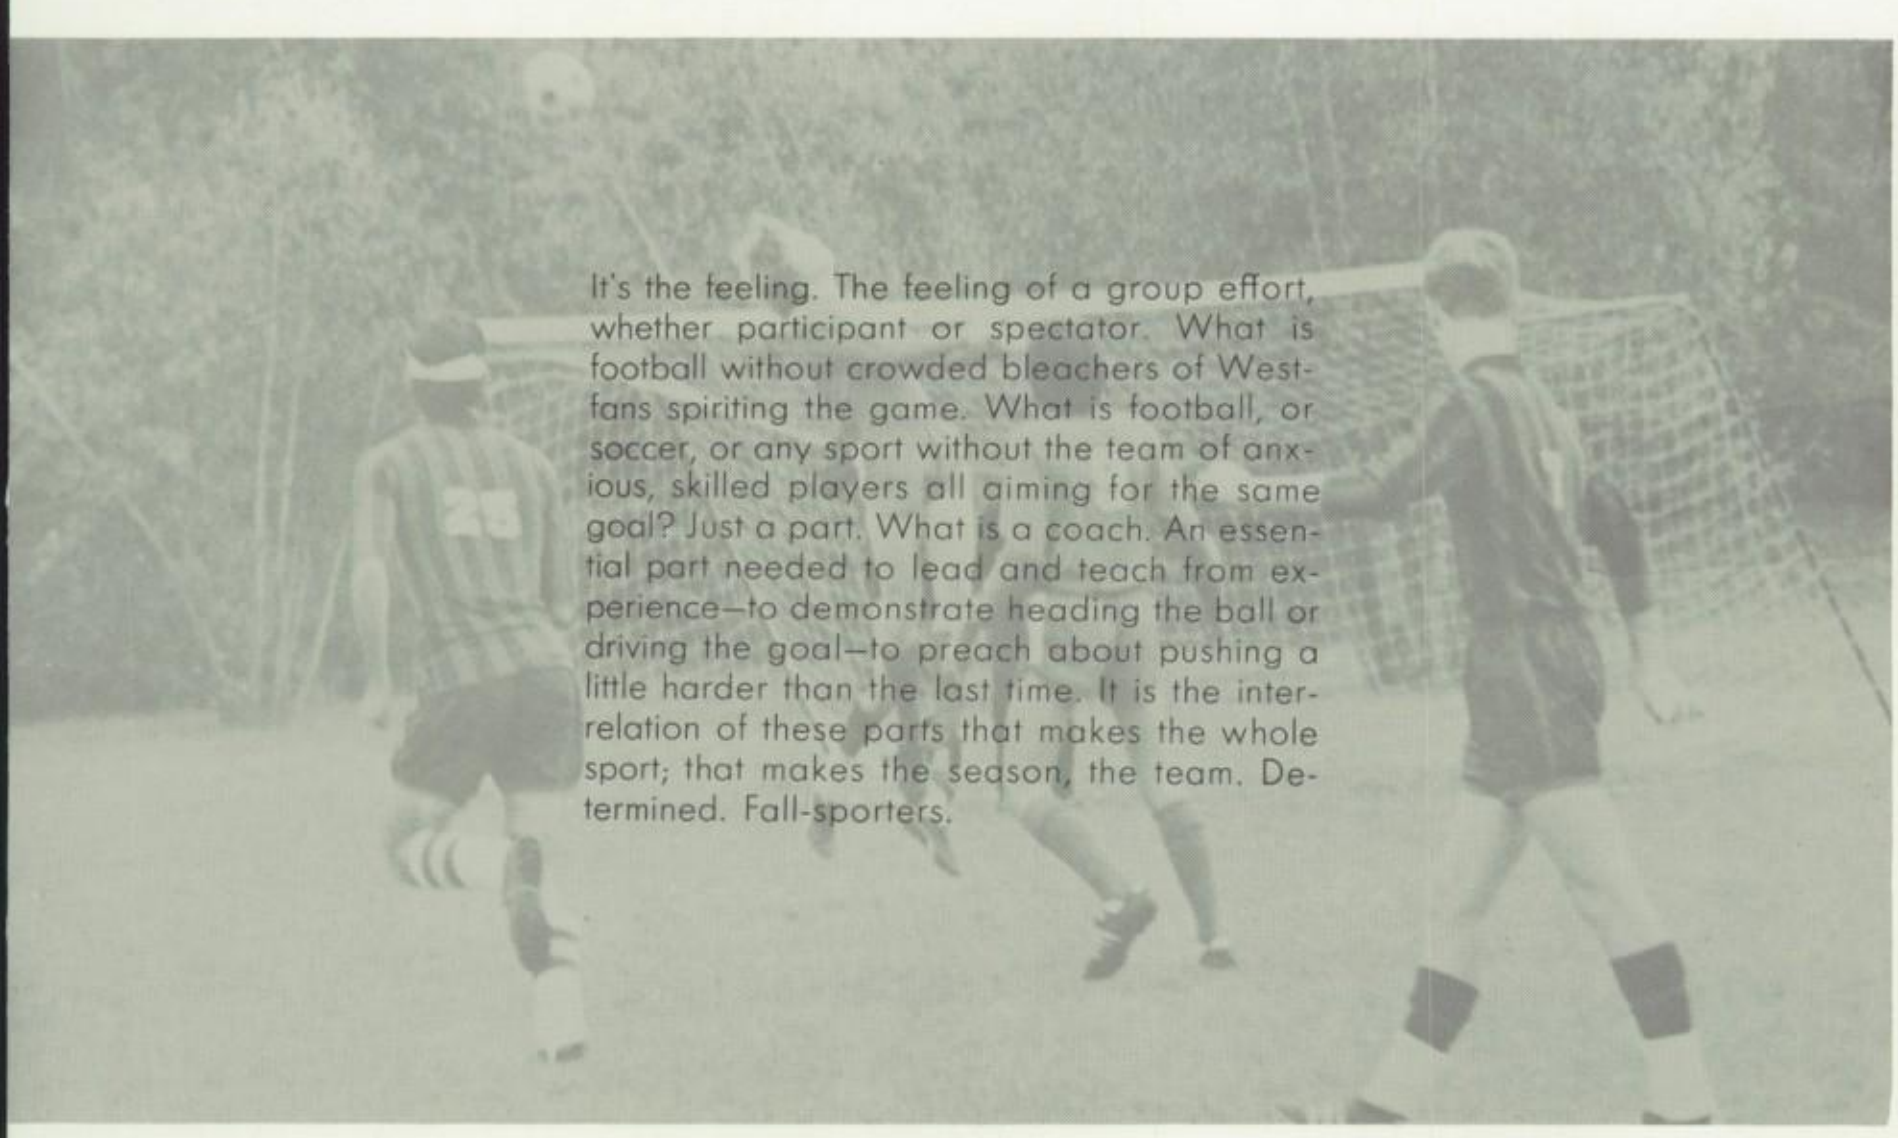
Moving in schools or in clusters of power
The big ones,

they often, the little devour.





It's the feeling. The feeling of a group effort, whether participant or spectator. What is football without crowded bleachers of West-fans spiriting the game. What is football, or soccer, or any sport without the team of anxious, skilled players all aiming for the same goal? Just a part. What is a coach. An essential part needed to lead and teach from experience—to demonstrate heading the ball or driving the goal—to preach about pushing a little harder than the last time. It is the interrelation of these parts that makes the whole sport; that makes the season, the team. Determined. Fall-sporters.

Most sports remain fixed in tradition. Uniforms haven't changed, rules become obsolete, yet are not changed. The same plays are used over and over again.

Yet football, despite it's short history, has changed 100%. Instead of the Flying Wedge we have the Wishbone–T. We hear of "slashing speed, strong arm, gazelle grace, deceptive moves." Where are the Seven Blocks of Granite, The Four Horsemen, and Mr. Inside–Mr. Outside? Gone the way of "three yards and a cloud of dust."

Even more than the style of play, the athlete has changed. The football player is no longer content to be told what to do and how to conduct himself. He has found some sort of individuality. He wants to be judged by how he performs on the field, not on hair length or clothes. He questions, examines everything going on about him.

Quite a change from the old days. Quite a good change.

Hockey

Devotion produces the excellent team. The long hours of practice pay off and the mastery of the minutiae leads to the ultimacy of victory.

Only the desire to play can overcome the heat and exhaustion and convert them into the fulfillment of athletic and human potentials.

As the season progresses each player becomes more poignantly aware of her possibilities and potentials.

The pulse of the team is intensified by each victory and the enticing possibility of the Tournament.

Characterized by the wins, heady and sweet, and with the ever-present bitterness of defeat, the season advances toward the Tournament.

Two sides enter the contest and time seems to stand still while the outcome is being decided.

To the winners goes the exhilaration of victory, to the losers, the deflating experience of defeat. Hard times and happy memories—this is hockey at its best.

Soccer

Soccer is a season.
A series of long, hard games
Easily identified with a feeling long forgotten.
That unfamiliar, unexpected, refreshing feeling.
A feeling of victory over game and record.

Soccer is a team.
A team which thrives on competition,
Grows on unity, and wins on hustle.
Give them ball, net, and field
The team will try the rest.
Kicking, running, moving, passing.

All are intricate parts of the game of soccer.
Winning, laughing, enjoying, playing.
All are special parts of the game of soccer.
And South Jersey Co-Champs grow from the ball, the net, the season.

Soccer is a sport.

Cross Country

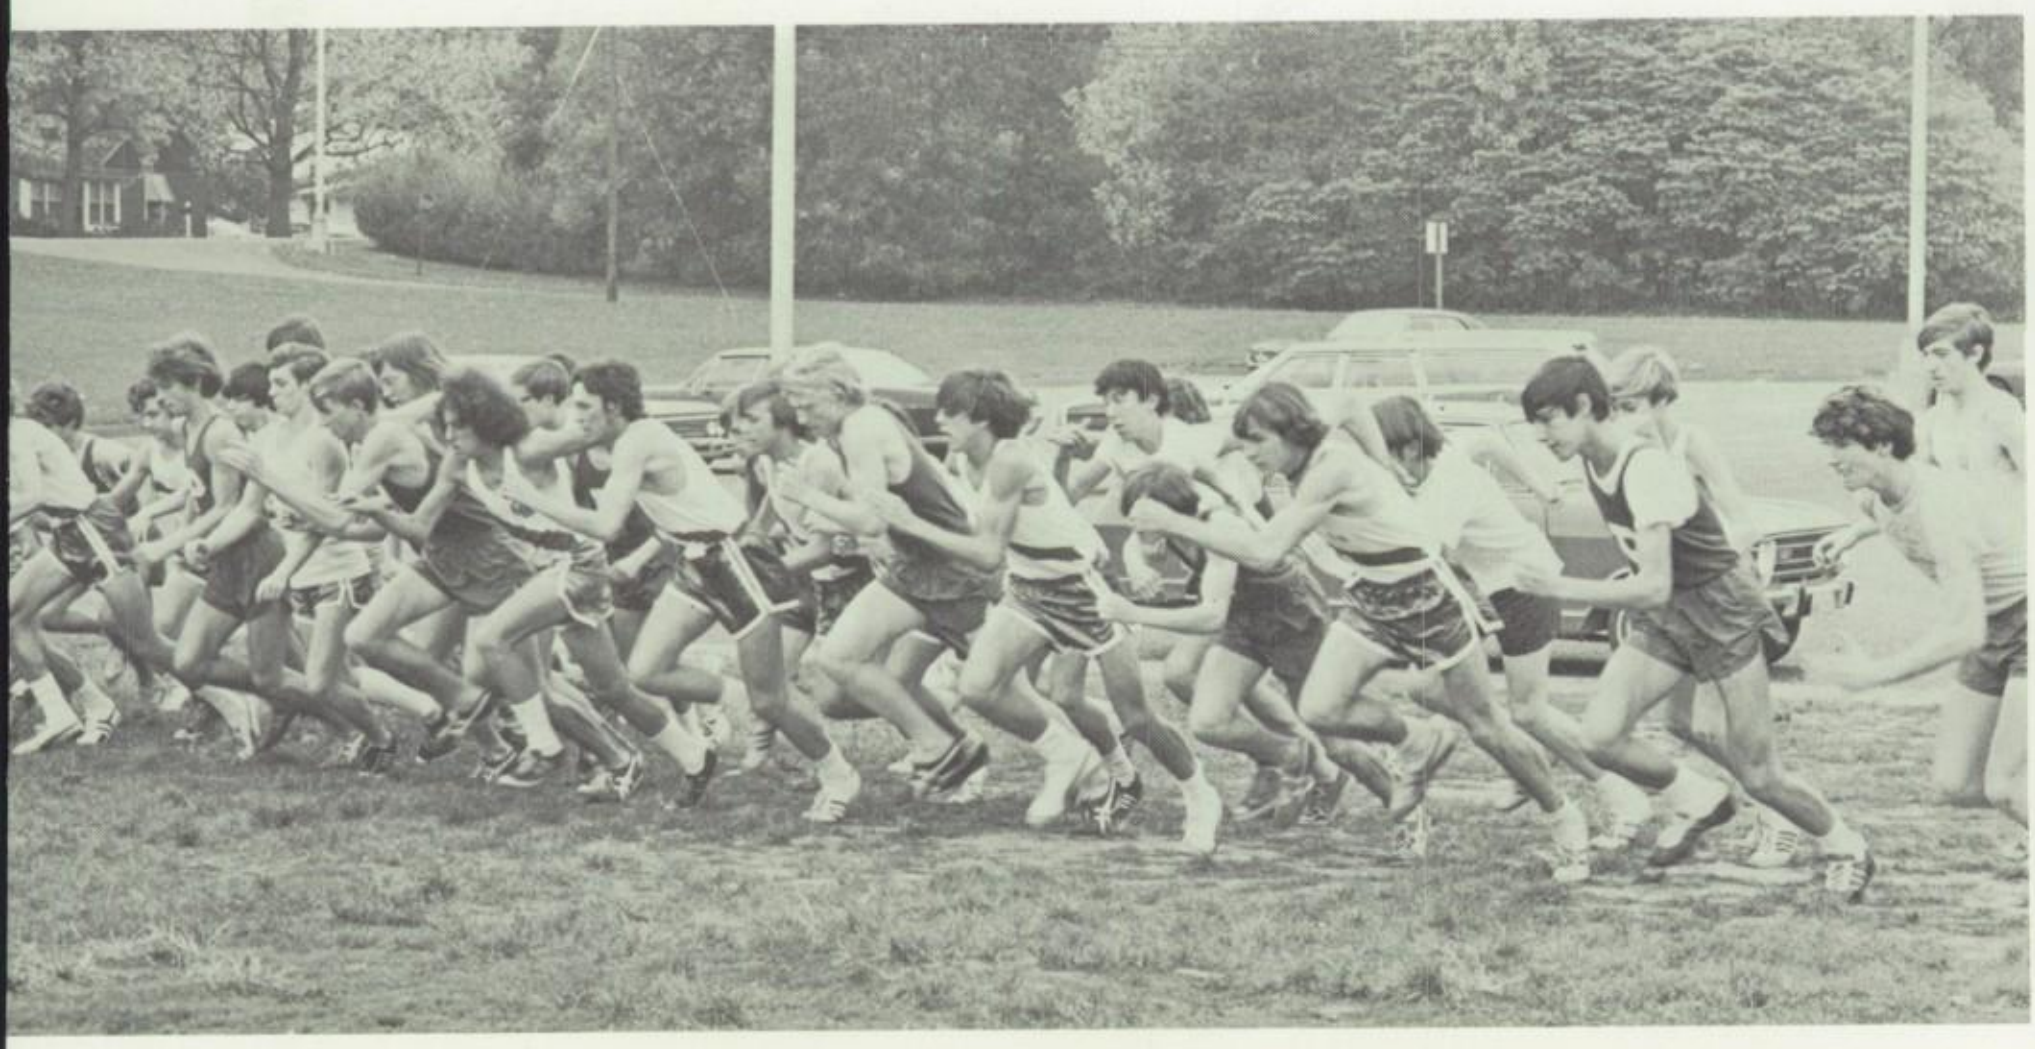
Running for miles and miles, thinking it's your last breath and seeing a flash of the other color whiz by you, and then you catch up and pass as they fall far behind.

Blurs of tree trunks and patches of green pass by and you feel the padded thump on the earth pounding in time with your heartbeat.

The air flows in and out of you quickly—too quickly if you're not careful, but if you're good you learn to control a steady rhythm.

People ask why you would run 2½ miles when they couldn't make it through the 600 in elementary school.

They ask you to name every runner who ever broke a record and you answer that back in 490 B.C. was the ancient marathon: the first cross country run. The ecstasy of winning, combined with a limp and weary body is an age-old feeling that could only and will only be experienced by the long distance runner.



Oftentimes the big fish eats the little fish; oftentimes the strong team beats the weak team. That's the way the ball bounces. Whether it's going in for the lay-up or shooting from the foul line, each team always tries its hardest to survive, for survival means recognition, and recognition is vital. The recognition of the fans who silently wait for the music of the free exercise to end so that they can hear their performer's scores soar high above the opponents. When the scores light up on the board and the team jogs into the locker room, the stands toss their fans out to buy pretzels and sodas. It's half time and they're talking about the game. They're all talking about the same thing . . . about winning. Determined. Winter-sporters.

Basketball might be called the "Sport of Misconceptions." The very nature of the sport is a breeding ground for these ill-conceived notions.

People speak of "soft touch", "great hands", "leapers", "ball-handling", "great natural ability". All very true, yet few stop to realize what has gone into the development of these "natural talents." Even the seemingly aimless weaving has been carefully arranged.

People say "practice makes perfect." Nobody just goes onto the court and starts throwing in shots. Hours upon hours are spent learning to refine techniques that look so "natural". Dribbling, shooting, passing, and rebounding must be learned. It's easy to forget those afternoons spent out in the freezing wind with seared lungs, cold legs, and numb hands. Or the hot summer days gasping for air and water, drenched with sweat.

They work to learn to "block out", "sky", 'pop", "lay 'em up." They work for the dream of scoring the winning point! Through t all, they enjoy, have fun.

'Look at that shot!! Boy, if only it came to me hat naturally."

Basketball

We want shifting done in the zone
By Donna Dillon the girl of skin and bone.
We want rebounding on foul shots
So step in the key and look real hot.
When it goes to Lorraine it's marshmallows
When it goes to Sandy she's on her toes.
Robin gets the ball and trips on her feet
While Morris is on her seat.
Sitting on the bench is Big Dee
While the cheering is done by Mary.
Hofknecht gets the ball and guns real fast
While everyone else is looking for a pass.
Lorraine is our bulldozer on the court
While Rosie is always a good sport.
And in the League we were #1
Never again to be outdone.

A strange sport, wrestling. No longer does the "big man" dominate. Here the little men have the same advantages, the same skills. Their wins count the same as the heavyweights'. This is the attitude which breeds good wrestlers—equality, respect, and the realization that you're a part of a team.

Perhaps more than any other sport, grappling demands sacrifice. Dozens of uneaten meals, countless hours of salty sweat stinging your eyes. Sore, red mat burns, and the dull, aching throbs of strains and pulls. Days of constant practice, all for a six minute performance. Grunts, groans, and bloody noses. Incredible exertion, lungs crying for air, dry mouths. Sometimes it pays off, sometimes it doesn't. Then you go back to the grind—sweat, groans, starving, burns, exertion. All for six long hard minutes.

A rare sport, wrestling.

All is silent. The stands are full. A. white-suited performer walks to the mats lined up on the floor of the gymnasium. He closes his eyes, steps back and pauses. His arms raise as he breaks into a gallop and throws himself onto the mats in a diverolltoabackbendwalko-verdirectlyintoaflip and he lands on his feet. The crowd gasps, applauds, and is silent. The performer approaches the parallel bars. He takes a deep breath and mounts going-intoahandstandandflipheclearsthebars and falls to the ground. Applause, then silence. The rings are swinging. He must mount them and keep them still throughout his routine. The iron cross is his move and he makes it, with sighs from the fans. He moves on to the next piece of apparatus—the vaulting horse. He pauses, lifts to his toesandrunsreachingout-forthehorsewhichsitsthereandstraightarmed-andleggedhestretchesoutoverthepiecea ndlandshard on his feet. Then he walks over to the side horse where he grips thepommels-tightlywhilehereleasesandregripsagainandhis-legsfollowacircularmotionaroundandaroun-duntil he dismounts. A single slip would cause moaning from the fans, but all is silent. The final piece he performs on is the high bar and he does the movements with perfect form and accuracy. No faults, high score. This is gym-nastics at West.

The continuous flow of movements on the bars with only one stop for each routine of leg circles and thigh rolls and mounts and dismounts . . . The balance beam, a steady tightrope supporting the weight of arabesques and walk-overs and splits, and those things that we can't do on solid ground that they can perform to perfection on a suspended wooden beam. Or a horse, without pommels, to vault over, always hoping to land safely so that the spotter only has to stand there in amazement.

A team that has been winning for as many seasons as it has been, shouldn't have to practice so much. But that is Mr. Rhea's strategy— practice. He has his boys practicing in the heated waters of the Jewish Community Center day and night, perfecting their strokes and jack knives so that they can always outscore the opponent. They have to win. They're the best in their sport.

Swimming

It's not like when you were little and in camp because then you wore a cap
and did the doggie paddle until you got into the deep water where you couldn't stand and your cap always popped off when you went too deep and your eyes stung, your ears clogged with water and your nose plugs slipped off.
Now you can win for your school doing laps of chlorined back stroke and butterfly and free-style until it's coming out of your ears (and you always wished that it would).

Come on, bring it in! Double up! Just one more mark! Make it a big fill! Right in the pocket! All of these comments and more, plus the noise of the automatic pin-setters, soda machines, and ball returns make bowling the great sport it is. You must have the proper size shoes, take the right amount of steps for the proper approach, and then develop your own spot-bowling technique. Then the spares and strikes will come and the gutter balls and splits will just fade away. Well, not fade away completely, but your average will climb and you'll be in the 1-3 pocket more than ever. Oh, bowling. That's right up my alley!

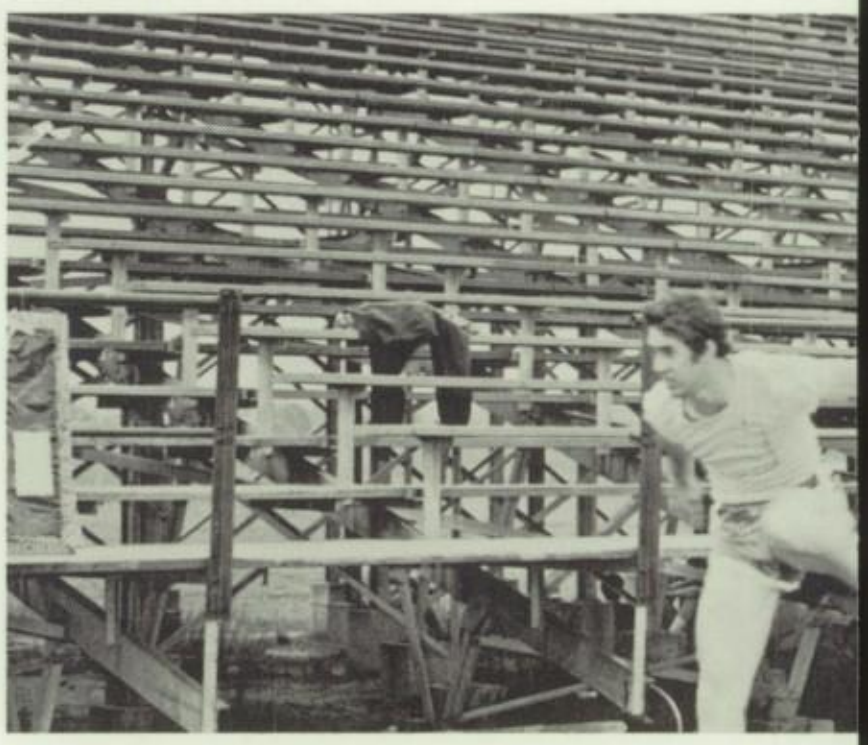
Track



Track

"You guys, after a good workout, should feel like the top of your head's coming off. That's what track is all about." Track—sprinting, jogging, jumping, pacing, vaulting, throwing, hurling. Why do it, for glory? That's not the case. The only spectators at track meets are the kids on the other team. Are we all there to win? That's doubtful, for only one can win. Most say they do it for their own benefit, or because they love to run. Sweating, puffing, hurting, grimacing with pain. Mothers who see their sons limp in with legs wrapped in yards of bandages and tape say, "Why do you do it? Is it worth all that pain?" The inevitable answer: Yes!

How low can you go?
With a wedge or a putter.
Once past the hazards of sand traps
and water traps and trees
you're on the fairway and rolling towards the pin.
Now's your chance for an eagle

par or a bogie.
So you aim and putt and hope that the flag is lifted and the ball drops in.

If you take the stance at 11:00 and 1:00 then you can play. Always bent knees and locked wrist. Try not to forget the ball bag and the score sheets for the next match so we don't have to forfeit. Maybe our winning streak can last the whole season. That'll only happen if our #4 man can beat #2 in the challenge match. Hey, then we can all move up on the ladder.

It's really not as easy as it sounds. When March comes we unscrew our presses and practice.
From 2:30 to 5:00 we're serving and rallying (not volleying) until we can perfect our spins and slices . . .
until we can ace our opponents (or at least get over the net), and make them think that the ball never left our hands.
Then we're ready for the Davis Cup at Forest Hills or Wimbledon
on lawn or clay, we're ready.

Usually it happens that people are told what to do and what not to do. There are things that everyone must do. High school activities are different. The clubs are always there, they are practically a part of the school structure itself . . . it's the individuals who are involved in the different extracurricular activities who are interested—they want to be a part of what interests them. Activities are diversified . . . there is really something for everyone either to learn, or to excel in what they already know. Activities. To do or not to do.

Precision drilling to "High School Boys" and just about any song the band can play. Knowing exactly what to do when the music ends and the drill doesn't. Right on. Spending hours and hours armed with rifle and saber and patriotic purple flag—endlessly marching off distances in the detabled, dechaired cafeteria.
Accidentally punching a hole in the ceiling or putting out a light with the tip of the flag.

It's all over. It's all over.
Four crowded bleachers of screaming '72's, '73's, '74's, and '75's.

Spirit is busting out all over.
Drums and batons and cymbals and flags, saddle shoes and pompoms and numbered jerseys.
It's all over. It's all over.
Five escorted girls in a circle with Joe English and John Avery walking around and around and around and stopping at Ruth Krankowski and putting a crown on her head and more screams, and tears coming down, but . . . It's all over. It's all over.

It's all over. It's all over.
One spotlighted-sweetheart at a time

Mrs. Mosser in stripes and Mr. D. in a kilt.
Refereeing the game?
It's all over. It's all over.

It's all over. It's all over.
Five o'clock and everything's done.
The drilling, the painting, the stuffing, the crocheting, the stacking, the piling, the organizing, and the panic,
And then the rain.
It's all over. It's all over
'71's—disheartened, disappointed, disgusted, and drenched.
Roaming through strobes and bleachers and bands.
Tomorrow's another day—of rain—postponement?
Saturday sunshine and finally the game.
It's all over. It's all over.

Service Aides

You're still half asleep and then you read the note about the alarm clock that never seems to ring on time. So you fill out a white slip and your day begins.

They come to you with their two-day old overnight books. So you ask them for 50¢.

They laugh and often walk away.

They sit with blank stares and you show them how to hold the scalpel.

They overcome the earthworm, now about the frog . . .

Your mother once said, "Think of how much you're helping the school," and then a friend said, "Think of the service points."

Band

Band Director: Mr. William D. Burley

If you play (or even own) an instrument, the bandroom is your 8th period destination. The Band wants you! It even arranges fun-filled Saturdays during the peak season of autumn to amuse you and bring you together with friends (musical prodigies all). It provides you with an opportunity to perform the tune you practiced down at the field just yesterday . . . the one the history class over in F-21 found so inspiring. The uniforms of purple and gold are the final touch—your appearance overwhelms the crowd.

Finally, you march out onto the field and the crowd cheers, and you sound almost perfect (can it be?), and everyone's in step as far as you can tell, and all the practice seems to make sense.

Theatre Workshop

Theatre Workshop consists of 142 nails which are hammered into 76 pieces of wood which will be made into 24 flats which will be painted from 7 empty cans by 4 paint covered people. But that's o.k. because there will be 10 people on stage standing in front of those flats trying to make people laugh while one lonesome director is laughing and yelling at the same time.

This is our contribution to Theatre. It is building with materials, yet it goes much further than that. There are friendships to be built—new conversations covered in old paint—both laughing hysterically on the same line of dialogue for five days straight. It's Theatre.

A "Fiddler on the Roof"
Sounds crazy, no?
But on our little stage
You might say that every one of us is trying to act, sing, and dance to present a fascinating show without breaking our necks.
It isn't easy.
You might ask, why do we stay on stage until 6:00, tired and sweating?
We stay because "Fiddler" is our show
And how do we keep our spirits from falling down?
That I can tell you in one word . . . Love

If you really want to hear about it, the first thing you'll probably want to know is how much a yearbook costs but I don't feel like going into it if you want to know the truth. I'll just tell you about the madman stuff that goes on behind the door of ASPECTS
LIONS ROAR
RAMPANT

Anyway, there are a lot of people involved—too many to talk about—but I guess I'll try. To begin with, there are 17 editors, all top notch, and some advisors who are always around to help or play games—like the chief advisor who's a born loser (repondez s'il vous plait) at games of words and chance, that is, and the business advisor who is obsessed with clocks (you stepped in what? and something else that I don't think I'll ever learn) who is the calming force of the staff. Then there's the literary advisor. He knows who played short stop for the White Sox in '42 and is now the manager of Macy's bargain basement, and he's always around to challenge someone for a steak or une crèpe.

What I really want to tell you about is the day we all went to the beach to take the pictures that were supposed to go on these pages. I mean, it just didn't work.

We thought the pictures would be good and maybe even explain some things in the book, but some—————switched some chemicals and everything was dark, except the room. We did have fun, and anyhow, I'm sure these pictures are just as good.

Everything happened the way it did because of those 17 and some editors and advisors—like the VAP who makes lists and maybe is the real Maria Papadatos in disguise, and the literary editor who works only under pressure and seems to manufacture games part-time, and the art editor who's part-time salesgirl and part-time sitter, and all the other dullards who seem to be part-time doers, but honestly, who knows.

That's all I'm going to tell about, because when you start telling about people, well, you begin to miss them, even if you don't want to, but I do . . . especially after seeing the book finished and all. Anyway, enjoy the book, it's yours.

Everyone at one time or another experiences underclassmanism and all the mania that accompanies it. And everyone who has passed that stage goes on to become an old, tired, rundown, overworked senior. Not true. It may seem that way when senioritis sets in, but actually it can't be true. Why? Because each senior after graduating has to move on to somewhere, something. In time old friends go to college . . . old friends get married . . . old friends grow old . . . some will always remain as old friends, and some will be forgotten—it is inevitable. Just ask a former senior and they'll think about all the names and faces of the friends they had at one time. Everyone gets the chance. The time has come.

What can we give you?

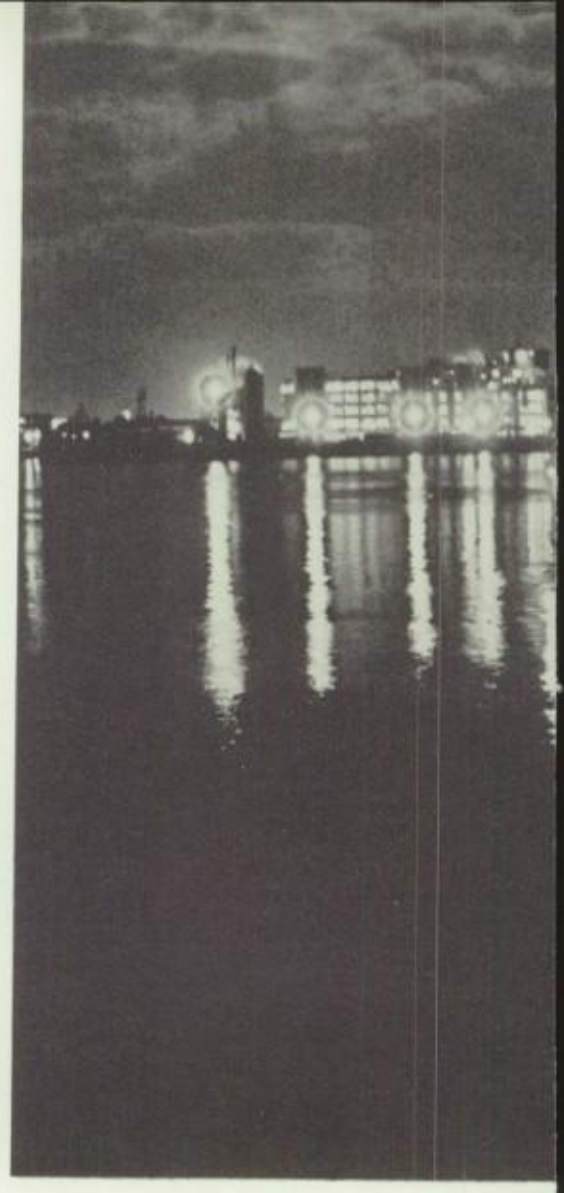
J. HEULINGS COLES SCHOOL
Cherry Hill, N. J.

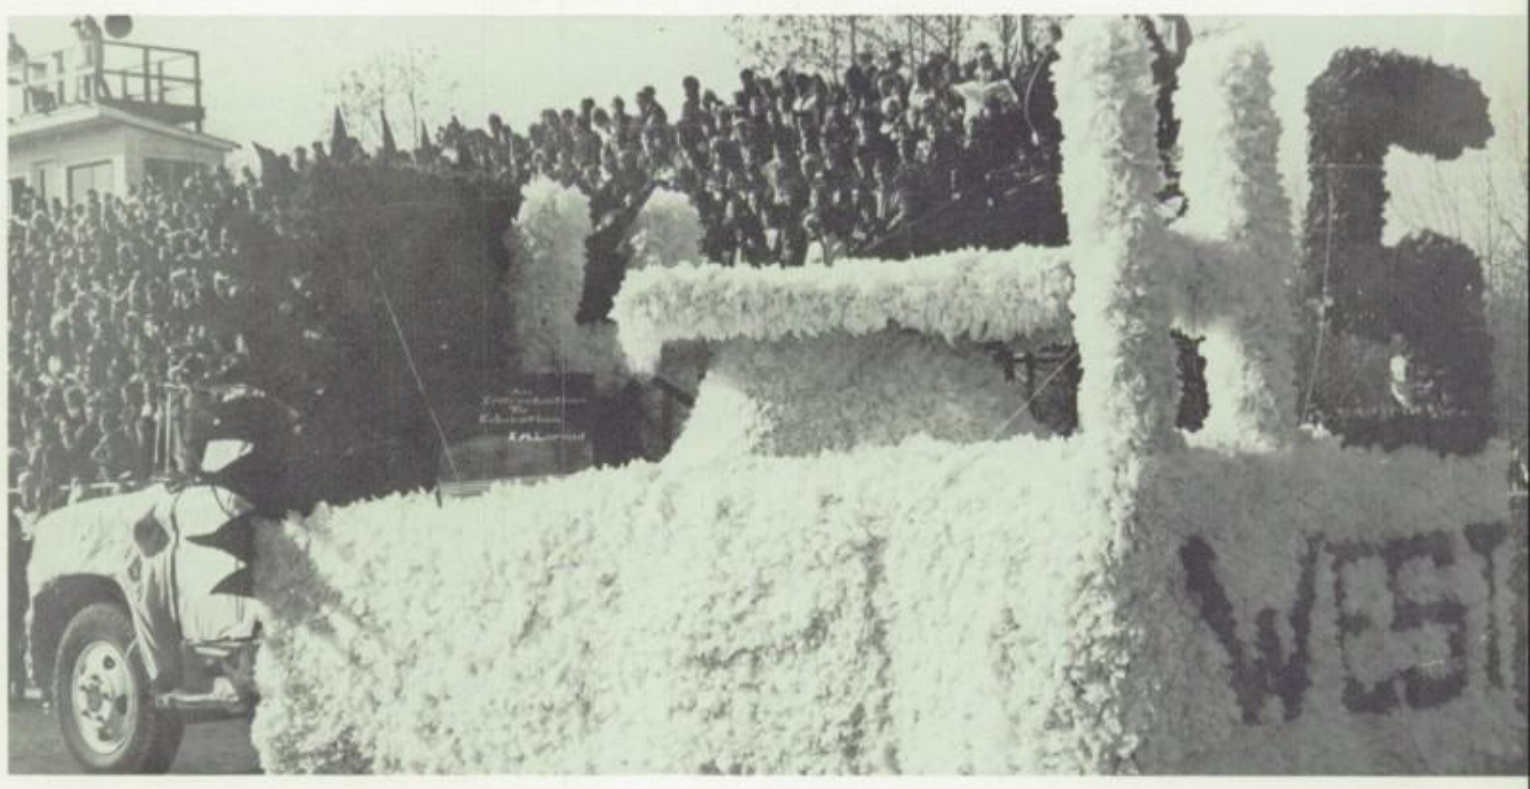
Sixth Grade

1965 1966



Our story began four years ago—in September of '69. We came, a big class, anticipating. Bringing with us our Brainerd Leadership in the form of President D'Anastasio who switched titles and became the governor of our freshman class. He worked hard with Bruce and the others to make us unique. We were winners who hid out in D-1 before school, during school, and after school, and we knew it because you couldn't outdo 72, and we adopted that as our slogan. $ucce$$ no longer meant only money—we put our heads together . . . and became sophomores. Sophomores who no longer had a standard dress code. Sophomores who could come to school dressed in anything as long as their midriffs and feet were covered (very interesting), and sophomores with the same leadership selling new and different things after school (meatball and matzoball?) no, pickles and bagels—"You don't have to be Jewish to buy a sophomore bagel." There was a student strike for rights—we got involved. There was a centennial football game—our first with East. We may not have been #1, but we tried harder, a dance, arulleg (spell it backwards), with a maze and everything. It was a good year.

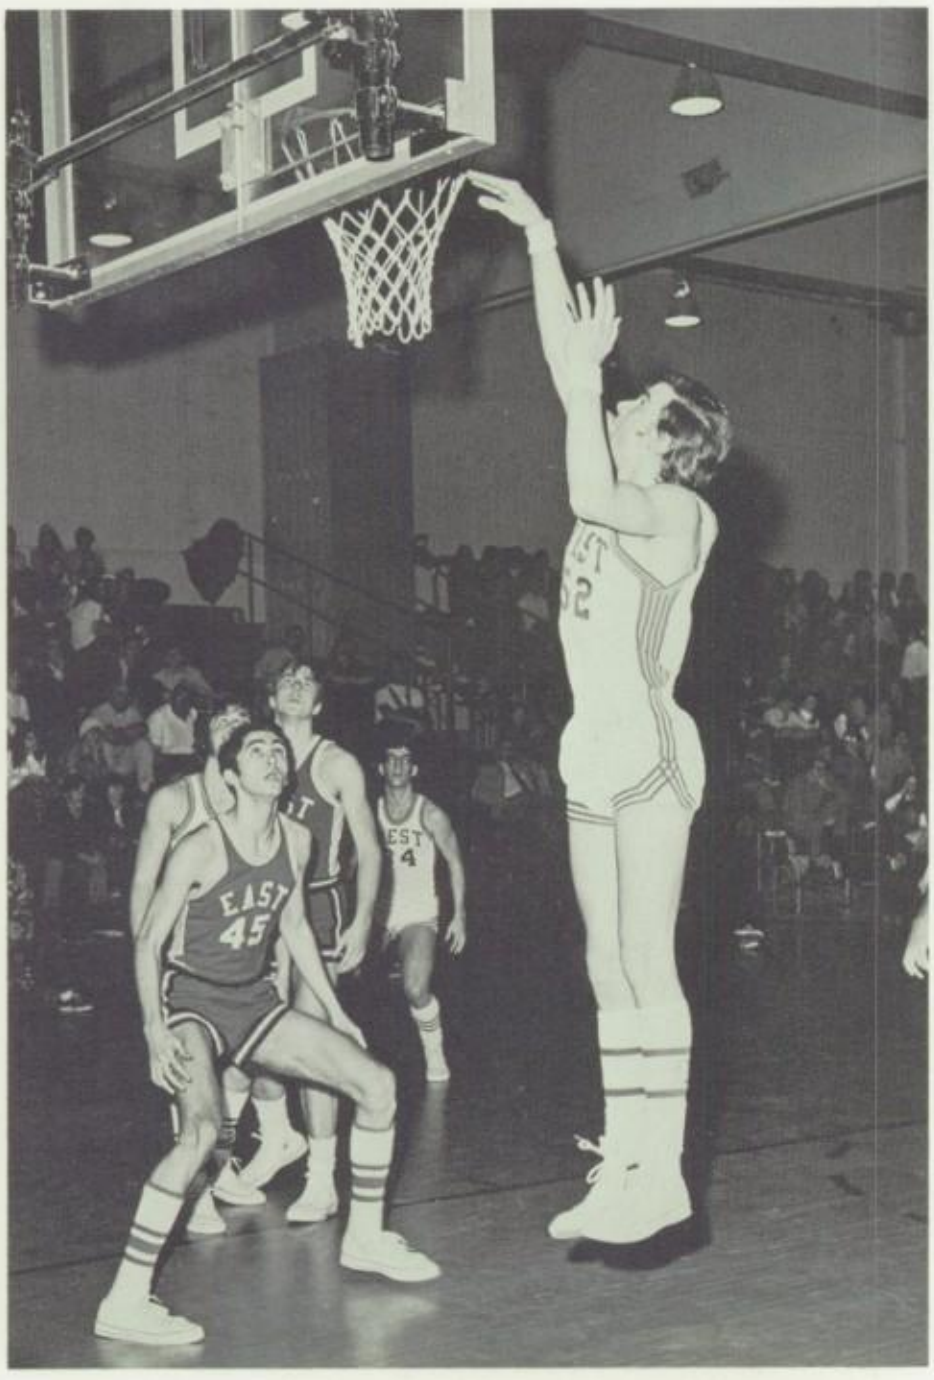
Class History



The "devil cameth" in our 3rd year during a Theater Workshop dance, and so did our new class advisor, full of new ideas like collecting dues and having a prom that could "float up the smelly Delaware," and the new but notsonew ticket of D'Anastasio Newman won this time. Yes, the same governor (how do you think we got this far?). Our float won, not only because it was the best, but because our lioncab could bat it's eyelashes thanks to someone's last minute genius. We may have had a losing football season, but our "Freddie" was George M. We were definitely heading in the right direction.

Class History

Acting department chairmen and principals characterized year #4. It was our last year and we really wanted to do something with it. With smoking rights and no dress code everything seemed so informal; we didn't even wear drapes and tuxedos for our portraits. Ruth Krankowski was our queen, and George Michael came to the auction with some records and things saying "Buy yourself a babe." Some did, and got oldies but goodies. We still were pushing for more, with Dance dances and magic shows, and our float was almost good enough (how about an alumni float?). Even though football didn't score high, we managed to outscore East in basketball everytime. There was no stopping us.



It's the last year. Not the last of four, but the last of many more. All these people have been together, worked together, loved together and learned much from it. Learned what it is like to walk to school with the same person for years and then finally the last year, this year, drive together. Eager to grow by watching others grow. Interested in pursuing– not always everyone, but that's because "There are only the pursued, the pursuing, the busy, and the tired." A diversified year–each individual did whatever he wanted to do because he learned to be independent. It's a good thing, too, because it may be the last year. But it's really a beginning.

Did you ever think of what you really wanted to be? I'm not talking about being first string on the basketball team or being in the Hall of Fame or being the smartest person in your class. Maybe what I mean is that there has to be something beyond that . . . beyond being remembered in school. It's always nice to be remembered for something special you did, which at that time seemed the greatest event of your life, but what I mean is that next year there will be a whole set of faces and events that will be remembered. Did you ever think of what you will really want to be when next year there will be no Hall of Fame and no time for the basketball team? You know my picture is on one of these pages.

—Hey you better hurry! The 8:10 is almost on.
—Don't worry about it. I'm already signed in. He knows I'm out here.
—Where are you going? It must be great to just leave homeroom like that.
—I have to see my counselor about what courses to take at college. It's a real pain making sure you get a good schedule. You'll see next year that it's not so great being a senior. All the decisions . . .
—Maybe, but I've got time. You gonna be in lunch today?
—If we decide to go out, probably not—it's my week for driving. I'll talk to you tonight, okay?
—Forget that. I've got tons of work.
—Oh yeah, I forgot you guys are still doing work. Too bad, the shore's really nice this time of year. I wonder who's coming tomorrow?
—Well, I've really gotta go back in. See you later—that's if you and your friends ever decide to come to school again!
—You can catch us during practices or on the 12th for sure. If not, well, we'll all be back Thanksgiving.

I once dreamt that everything I touched turned to gold.
That I stepped through the looking glass
and became snow white.
That the clock
never struck twelve and the wizard was a real wizard not a scarecrow or a tinman.
That I didn't prick my finger on the spinning wheel and got my three wishes.
That I finished first and won the silver skates that brought me
to the gingerbread house.
But the birds ate the breadcrumbs that I dropped along the way and I fell back
through the looking glass.

When you think about it, you've actually got a few more days
to put off saying good-bye, have a nice life,
and see you next someday.
Because you've spent so much time together and alone that you know each other well enough to say good-bye and call me tonight when you know that you're leaving and they are too.
Leaving for another world of greater experience and newer people
and need for the old,
so you promise you'll never forget anything—and you don't.

Before you leave, walk around the school a couple of times to be certain that you've got everything. Swing open the gym doors and walk the length of the locker room, counting the suits hanging over the rafters. Then cross the hall into the cafeteria and pull down a few campaign posters. You just might want to remember. You should even make a last short stop at your locker to empty out the old math tests and chemistry labs that you thought you had lost in January. Have you got everything? Forget a few things? That's okay. You're ready.

On that beautiful day when the two of you put your heads together and talk of your Wedding Day... remember to include your

Mr. Mike Benard . . . for putting the sam hill up with us.

After all we have said in this book, the staff of Rampant 72 finds itself speechless, for mere words cannot express the admiration that we, and past staffs, have for this advisor. She makes it possible for us to lean towards and not back from problems that need confrontation. Without her, insignificant problems would be disastrous. She gives us direction and inspiration when they are most needed. Now she is making a change. By no longer sharing her knowledge of mathematics with others she will have more time to spend at home . . . yet those who stay at home also serve. We know it is difficult to start anew but she can do it. She is strong, and this she has proven to us over and over again. We hope to be as strong . . . for we will miss her. She's always there, and always will be. And that will never change.

Mrs. Carol Mosser

Rampant 72 is a comment on the high school experience. An existing framework or shell which each individual fills in his own way. We leave something, we take something, and the shell always remains. We have expressed this theme figuratively through the artwork and copy on our cover, introduction, and divider pages. The various symbols on the cover represent the various aspects of the school framework, the shell which exists without the student. The heart depicts the influx of life into this empty shell. We have carried this idea to our dividers, where a photograph fills the outlines of a symbol. The rhyming couplets on the introduction and divider pages are again figurative expressions, through ocean imagery, of our already-stated theme.
